Overview

The Department of Education (DepEd) will hold a one-day workshop and learning session on August 23, 2025, at the Government Service Insurance System Theatre, GSIS Financial Center, J.W. Diokno Blvd, Pasay City, Metro Manila. This initiative supports DepEd's transition to the New Government Procurement Act (NGPA), officially known as Republic Act No. 12009, which aims to modernize and simplify procurement processes across all government agencies.

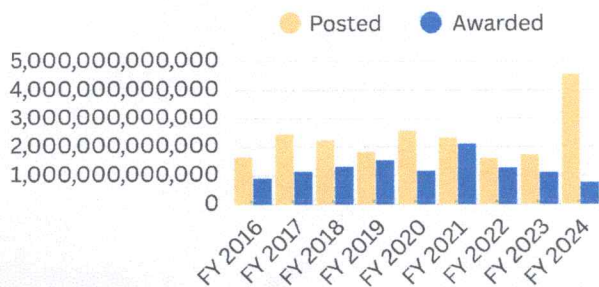

Learning Session on NGPA

This learning session delves into the NGPA, spotlighting its key features, transformative policy shifts, and institutional reforms. It aims to build a shared understanding of the law to ensure consistent and effective implementation across all levels of the Department—from central offices to regions and schools. It also provides space to address transitional issues and align strategies under the new legal framework.

Why It Matters

Government-wide data from FY 2016–2024 reveals a persistent gap between posted bid opportunities and awarded contracts, as recorded in the Philippine Government Electronic Procurement System.

While thousands of procurements are advertised each year, many do not lead to successful contract awards—highlighting ongoing challenges in planning, supplier engagement, and procedural compliance.

These missed opportunities have far-reaching consequences. According to Commission on Audit (COA) reports from FY 2020–2023, procurement-related issues remain the most frequently cited audit findings among government agencies, accounting for 45% of all observations.

Delays, irregularities, and non-compliance continue to disrupt school building projects, delay the distribution of learning materials, and hinder service delivery that directly impacts learners.

The 2024 EDCOM II Year 2 Report echoes these concerns, stressing the need to professionalize the procurement function. It notes that recurring management challenges—such as inadequate planning, weak oversight, and poor coordination—continue to undermine project implementation and DepEd's ability to deliver quality education. These issues often lead to shortages in materials, unfinished classrooms, and underutilized resources in schools.

Call to Action

Transforming procurement from a routine function into a strategic enabler of education delivery begins with building competence and shared understanding. This learning session is a key step in preparing DepEd's procurement actors to implement the NGPA with clarity, confidence, and accountability. By investing in people and systems, the Department seeks to close long-standing gaps in planning, execution, and oversight—ensuring that every procurement contributes to better outcomes for learners. This is how Maayos, Mabilis, at Malinis na Pamamahala ng Procurement is realized in practice.
